

More Married Women

Cherokee Times: Census figures show that 63 per cent of all women in United States 14 years of age and older are married. There were 2 million more married women in United States in February of this year than were shown in the 1940 census. War marriages, no doubt, have played an important part in accumulation of this record. The census bureau attributes the large increase to "psychological effects" of the war and to a new sense of economic security as a result of full employment and higher wages.
